

The initial reasons the telephone soliciting companies for opposing the "Do not call" law was that Americans who are employed doing this would be put out of work. Immediately after the law was passed almost all telephone solicitations have been from other low cost countries. Their concern never was for this country. If the cost of paying Americans to do this function was too high for them than our time as Americans wasted answering their calls should also be too high. We need the FCC to keep this law in place.
